

From Antiques Roadshow UK specialist Marc Allum comes a new annual almanac that keeps you up-to-date with the stories, facts, and often-amusing idiosyncrasies of the ever-changing global art and antiques market. Allums Antiques Almanac 2015 reveals such fascinating nuggets as: What Lee Harvey Oswalds wedding ring sold for How much the worlds most expensive printed book cost per word The Victorian dolls house which joined the soaring property market, sold by the owner with some very odd pre-conditions Why someone was prepared to pay over $4 million for the miniature effigy of a dashing bodyguard Allums anecdotal and irreverent style gives a unique insiders insight into a world fuelled by history, avarice, and passion. Allums Antiques Almanac is set to become the annual must-read for the collector in all of us. Marc Allum is a freelance art and antiques writer and consultant based in Wiltshire, England. Marc has been a miscellaneous specialist on the BBCs Antiques Roadshow program—broadcast in the United States by PBS—since 1998. He is also the author of The Antiques Magpie.
