Excerpt from Annual Report of the Health Department of the City of Richmond, Va: For the Year Ending December 31, 1915 To the Honorable Board of Health of the City of Richmond. Gentlemen, - I have the honor to submit for your consideration the forty-fourth annual report of the Richmond Health Department. This report is in the usual form, consisting of my own report as Chief Health Officer - the tenth since I have held this office - and of the usual financial and statistical tables and the reports of the other officers of the Health Department. Brief reports from the City Coroner, the Assistant Coroner and the City Chemist, submitted by them, are also included. In no other of the nine annual reports which I have submitted to you have I been able to show results quite so good as will be set forth in the present report. When, year after year, these reports have shown a steadily decreasing death rate - especially in connection with those diseases in which the results of our work would most clearly appear - I have been fully conscious of the fact that this cannot go on indefinitely. On the one hand, it is recognized that there are widespread conditions, little or not at all understood, which affect the death rate and the prevalence of disease. On the other hand, the death rate from many of our most typical preventable diseases has been so lowered, year after year, that in connection with many of them it is hard to see how further lowering can be brought about. In spite of these considerations, a number of new records were established in 1915. The general death rate was 18.89 per 1,000, against 19.70 in 1914. This was the fifth consecutive year of decreased general death rate and was the first year on record for Richmond with a death rate under 19. It is too soon to have heard from many other cities as yet, but reports show that in both New Orleans and Washington the general death rate in 1915 was decidedly higher than in 1914. The death rate from typhoid fever was the lowest ever recorded for Richmond - 12.3 per 100,000 inhabitants, against 14.1 in 1914. This was the seventh consecutive year (with the exception of a slight increase in the year 1913) that the death rate from this disease has been lowered. When the typhoid death rate was lowered to 24.1, in 1909, this was considered almost phenomenal for a Southern city, at that time. Yet our 1915 rate was but little over half the 1909 rate, and, to repeat, this has been progressive, each year, with a single exception, being lower than the preceding and than any year previously recorded. The death rate from infantile diarrhea (under two years of age) was the lowest on record - 65.3 per 100,000 inhabitants, against 71.9 in 1914.
