

Host Kelly Galea interviews interior designer Susan Rayner for this episode of Power Up Living. We're taking a look at what interior design styles and trends will continue on and what's new for 2014. Susan also shares what she'd like to see more of ... and what she wishes would just go away already! - About our Guest- After a successful career in Human Resources, Susan wanted to move into a field that better utilized her creative abilities. Once she started taking Interior Design courses at Harrington College of Design she knew she had found her niche. After graduating in 2006, she worked for two well-regarded residential design firms in the Chicago area. Using the skills she gained there, she launched own firm, Susan Rayner Interiors. Susan's aesthetic is clean and classic, whether the style is modern, traditional or somewhere in between. She is passionate about creating positive change for her clients while allowing them to control their costs. She has a friendly, collaborative approach that allows her clients to enjoy the design process. This ensures they will love the end result – a house they enjoy coming home to.
