

April 6, 2001, began as most spring days do in Arizona, temperature in the low 80s, a few clouds but generally calm and serene. Barry Kluger has begun the day with a round of golf with his childhood friend, gearing up for the events later that evening, dinner preparation for the Jewish holiday of Passover that next night, which was to be a homecoming of sorts. 20 miles away, back at home, 18-year-old Erica Kluger, was leaving for work on a day she normally was off. 12 minutes later, Erica lay unconscious, the victim of a car crash. One hour later, Barry arrived at the hospital, only to be told his daughter was dead. 2012: A Life Undone: A Fathers Journey Through Loss..Continues is the story of the sudden death of Barry's daughter, Erica, the early days of her life and the hours, days, weeks, months and years after her passing. Men grieve differently, sometimes outwardly, sometimes privately but in the end, the journey helps us to see what we were, what we are and what we can become. A Life Undone: A Father's Journey asks the question: was it a life unraveled or a life unfinished?
